Rose Royce

Rose Royce ascended to the top of the soul music world with a string of great hits and a tight, full sound that rivaled many of the best soul and funk groups of that era.

Formed by trumpeter/vocalist Kenny Copeland, drummer Henry Garner, trumpeter Freddie Dunn, and keyboardist Michael Nash in the mid-70s, the group first served as a backup band for Edwin Starr, who introduced them to his “War” producer and Motown hitmaker Norman Whitfield. This led to regular work with many of Whitfield’s other Motown acts, including the Undisputed Truth.

The nine-member band performed the Whitfield-produced MCA soundtrack to the Richard Pryor movie Car Wash. With its hand-clapping, funky intro, exciting vocals and the band’s great performance, the title track became one of the biggest dance songs ever, leaping to No. 1 on the pop and

Banda Machos

Banda Machos hales from the Mexican state of Jalisco and sings a combination of Banda music, Quebradita and Ranchera. The band has recorded more than 20 albums featuring songs composed by Joan Sebastian, Jose Guadalupe Esparza, Jose Alfredo Jimenez, Ivan Diaz, Horacio Ortíz and Marco Antonio Solis.

In 1990, 12 young men from Villa Corona came together to form a musical group and released their first album Serian Las Dos on cassette that same year. Composed primarily of cumbias, rancheras and corridos, the band's debut achieved moderate success. The band's breakthrough came with 1992's release of Sangre De Indio, which spawned Al Gato Y Al Raton, their biggest hit at the time.

Their success came early on in the Quebradita wave, a style popularized in Los Angeles' Latin circuit and made them radio

Retreat to eat by shady Solano Gardens exhibit

Several picnic tables adjacent to the Solano Gardens invite fairgoers to sit and enjoy their favorite fair foods and the entertainment on the Americana Stage.

When Matt Molotov Bouvier is not performing his wild west show, local performers will take to the stage.

The Solano Gardens are designed by amateur gardeners but they produce professional results that inspire the green thumb in all of us.

On hand to answer gardening questions will be Solano County Master Gardeners. If you want to learn about water conservation options, visit the experts from the Solano County Water Agency.

Being as you are so close, visit the vendors in Expo Hall and check out the 1950s-era Batmobile on display from USA World Classic Event Center in Vallejo.

Americana Roadshow

Tucked in behind the food vendors and Expo Hall is a small stage packed with big excitement. Come see Matt Molotov Bouvier's wild west and thrills show on the Americana Stage.
